As the cast engage in game playing with host and Twitch's Live Programming Director Jon Carnage, they will answer questions live from the Twitch community and share an exclusive clip from the upcoming new season. Following the Q&A, there will be a live stream of the show's pilot episode from Season 1, a first for any television network.

"There is an authentic connection between SILICON VALLEY and the Twitch audience and this unique event is a great way to build upon that," states Sabrina Caluori, vice president Digital and Social Media, HBO. "Twitch offers a unique opportunity to provide exclusive content and a highly social experience to this influential community."
